

The background of the image is a wall painting in an ancient Egyptian style. At the top and bottom, there are decorative friezes containing rows of hieroglyphs. In the center, two human figures are depicted. The figure on the left is shown in profile, facing right. He has a dark skin tone, a white beard, and wears a tall white headdress with a black band and a long white plume. He is dressed in a yellow kilt with a white sash and holds a small object in his right hand. The figure on the right is also in profile, facing left. He has a dark skin tone and a black, dog-headed or jackal-like head. He wears a red kilt with a white sash and holds a small object in his right hand. The overall style is characteristic of ancient Egyptian art, with bold outlines and a limited color palette.
